Governance, Risk & Compliance – G33

Session Abstract

Creating Value for Management through ERM

In this session we will explore unique alternatives to traditional ERM programs that focus on driving value for both the board and management. In the ever increasing complex business environment, many organizations have relied upon an annual assessment of enterprise level risks to identify and understand the threats to the business. However, leading companies have recognized that to be successful, they need to build resilient organizations that are able to take those risks which offer the greatest rewards in return. These organizations treat risk management as a competitive advantage and recognize that instead of having management use the business to just better manage risks, they provide management the ability to use risk to better manage the business.

Target Audience

Anyone who is interested in learning how to better align risk management practices to create greater value for their business partners.

CAE, ERM Leaders, CRO and IT Internal Auditor

COBIT Objectives or Practices

PO9.4 Risk assessment
